FOR WHOSE BENEFIT

A PHYSICIAN'S OPINION.

"I have been practicing medicine for twenty years and have never been able to put up a vegetable compound that would, like Simmons Liver Regulator, promptly and effectively move the Liver to action, and at the same time aid (instead of weakening) the digestive and assimilative powers of the system."

GIVE ME SLEEP.

A morrow must come on
When I shall wake to weep,
But just for some short hours,
God, give me sleep!

I ask not hope's return,
As I have sowed I reap;
Grief must awake with dawn,
Yet, oh, to sleep!

No dreams, dear God, no dreams;
Mere slumber, dull and deep,
Such as thou givest brutes—
Sleep, only sleep!
—Anne Reeve Aldrich in Scribner's.

A FAMILY FEUD.

Those two rival families repeated on a small scale the discords of the Montagues and Capulets; only, with due regard to the civilization of the times, instead of spilling blood they spilled money. Instead of dead relatives there had been many lawsuits, long and entangled; they went to law for spite, for resentment, for anger; they kept at law with that obstinate delight in litigation which is one of the joys of provincial life. As usual, it was a question of trifles—a stream of water that had taken a wrong direction; an unruly goat that had leaped from the field of one into the field of the other; some obscure and stupid potatoes which, spreading themselves underground, had disregarded the boundaries.

Upon this showered legal documents. The lawyers toiled to write in that style of theirs, the last relic of barbarous invasions. Judgments ware multiplied. Lawsuits grew complicated. The two advocates rubbed their hands for joy, and from the aspect of things were sure of transmitting as a valuable inheritance those quarrels to their sons. How the enmity between the Pasquali and the Dericca families had been caused could not be clearly learned. Affirmations varied on one and the other side. But it was a deep and declared enmity. Being neighbors in town and in the country, they frequently met, looking askance at each other. The women heard mass in two different churches. If the Dericca girls wore blue gowns, the Pasquali girls at once put on pink ones. In the municipal council the Pasquali were always conservative and the Dericca naturally radical. That which one did the other would not have done for a thousand scudi. Where one went the other did not appear.

And then gossip, evil speaking, complaints, eagerness for scandal, malignity; in short, all that outfit of pleasing things which take place in provincial towns between two rival families. On top of all this, Carlo, the eldest son of the Pasquali, and Maria, the second daughter of the Dericca, thought it best to fall in love with each other.

Love in a small town has not much variety; usually it begins in childhood, continues amid games of blindman's buff, is apt to manifest itself in social dancing parties and round games, and is always ratified by the parish priest and the mayor. These loves are recognized, superintended, established, registered in the household comings and goings, protected by grumbling grandfathers and by priestly uncles; loves without nerves, without tears, without tendernesses and fancies; something extremely calm and slow, the crystallization of love.

But Carlo Pasquali had had the incomparable fortune to pass, once, a fortnight at Naples, which made him look with scorn upon provincial customs; and Maria Dericca, at night by feeble lamp, had wept over the hapless heroines of Mastriani, and had envied them in their fantastic passions; therefore for these two was required an exceptional love. First it was a furtive glance; a softly murmured word, yet heard with singular perception by her who should hear it; a carnation pink fallen from a balcony by reason of the wind, of course; a sudden pallor of his, a sudden blush of hers; then, by the armed intervention of a rogue of a fifteen-year-old girl who came with a flatiron to smooth Maria's linen and the course of true love at the same time—a note and a brief reply; a little letter, a long letter and finally those voluminous epistles of eight or ten sheets of note paper which mark the highest point of the folly of love.

Alas! The joy of the young people was brief and sorrow rapidly arrived to destroy it. They were seen, spied, the news reached their respective papas and all the thunderbolts of paternal wrath, embittered by eleven lawsuits, fell upon the heads of the poor lovers. The balcony windows were closed, the bolts were fastened on the terrace door, the carnation pinks on the bush were counted, walks were forbidden, or at least made without previous notice, the hour of going to mass varied each Sunday—but those two continued to love each other. Rebuffs, exhortations, prohibitions, difficulties availed only to inflame their love; at night, in the winter, Maria arose, dressed herself, wrapped herself in a shawl, and in slippers, with bated breath, trembling for fear, descended the stairs to a window of the first floor; the young friend was in the street, leaning against the wall.

So they talked for two or three hours, without caring for the cold, the rain, or the loss of sleep; they talked without seeing each other from a distance of five meters of altitude, becoming silent at every sound of a passer, then cautiously resuming their discourse, with the continual fear that Maria's parents might arouse and find her in that aerial colloquy. But what did it all matter to them? They had within their hearts sunshine, light, springtime, courage, enthusiasm. If the king had come they would not have moved. Instead the brother of Maria, one night when he could not sleep, arose from his bed and found the door ajar, went down the stairs, heard a murmur, and caught his sister in the act. He unceremoniously barred the shutters in the face of Carlo, gave Maria a resounding box on the ear and brought her to her room. Next morning the small window on the first floor was walled in.

Oh, all ye faithful lovers, who grieve amid the pains of thwarted love, imagine the despair of those two! Their letters were no longer legible, for tears blotted the words; rows of exclamation points, that looked like Prussian soldiers under arms, followed the daily imprecations against fortune, destiny, fate and other impersonal beings incapable of resenting them, a thousand fantastic plans were created discussed, and then rejected. Carlo would have liked to elope with Maria, but his father allowed him no money, and it would have been difficult to put together the nine lire and fifty centesimi for two tickets for the journey to Naples; they thought for a moment of suicide, but found that it would not solve the difficulty. Then, in the long run, their love became systematic, the imprecations were always the same, and they could not go to their beds without having "poured forth upon the faithful paper the fullness of their grief."

In the town nothing was talked of but their unshakable love and their torments; they were the objects of general interest; if a Neapolitan arrived, the townsfolk took him to see the ruins of the amphitheater and related the case of Carlo and Maria. Therefore the young people, flattered in their amour propre, assumed the behavior fitting to the circumstances. Maria was always pale, with a melancholy air, never smiling, always talking to her girl friends about her joyless days, refusing to amuse herself, content to resemble in all respects one of Mastriani's heroines.

Carlo took lonely walks, was always deeply depressed; at balls he never moved out of a corner, content that they murmured around him. "Poor young man, that unfortunate love affair saddens his life!" In society, at small festivities, in visits, with the unwearying monotony of the province, the discourse always returned upon the subject of the two lovers. Carlo and Maria bore with dignity the burden of their popularity.

Finally, after I don't know how many years—four or five, it seems to me—of this continual struggle, of daily weeping, of long, long love maintained alive by dissensions, the aspect of things changed. There was a worthy person—there still are such—who with many efforts of eloquence persuaded the parents that by the lawsuits they were losing property, and much of it, as witness the two advocates who had grown rich at the expense of their clients; that those two young people were pining and would go into a decline because of that thwarted love; the houses were side by side and the estates contiguous; Christ forgave and they must forgive, if they wished to find forgiveness. He said so much and so many other persons, moved by the example, interposed, that the questions came to a compromise which had, as its first chapter, the marriage of Carlo and Maria.

Here, surely, every one will suppose that the young people were greatly consoled, and will suppose truly—but my obligation as a sincere story teller constrains me to say that in their first free colloquy reigned a great embarrassment. They were accustomed to see each other at a distance, by stealth; to speak from a first floor window down to the street, in the darkness, disguising or smothering their voices; they found themselves quite different, perhaps a little ridiculous; they had no subjects of conversation, they were often silent, hastening in their thoughts the hour when they should quit each other. There were no more imprecations and tears to be mingled with the ink; they no longer wrote to each other.

Everything was free, smooth, easy for their affection; they were not obliged to think of subtleties by which to evade the vigilance of their elders; they took no more pleasure in murmuring a few words in secret; they made no more daring projects for the future. They would be married prosaically, without obstacles, like so many other silly couples. The townsfolk no longer took thought of them; the wonder and the comments on the marriage once over, Carlo and Maria no longer awoke attention; were no longer talked about; their behavior was noted no more; they ceased to be pointed out as an example of fidelity. Now all eyes were fixed upon the wife of the pretor, who was accused of too great partiality for the vice attorney—a serious piece of business.

The two lovers felt themselves forsaken; a great coolness arose between them. Carlo found that the virtues of his fiancee, those virtues which shone in her letters, were dimmed by the atmosphere of home. Maria frequently thought that Carlo was rather commonplace in his tastes, and that to end with a stupid marriage, so tempestuous a love was unworthy of a reader of Mastriani. A few lively remarks passed between them in regard to "illusions contradicted by the reality," about "mirages," "optical delusions" and similar pin pricks; a quarrel ensued, then two, then they became a daily occurrence. One evening Maria said with an irritated tone:

"Carlo, let us leave it off."

"Let us," he replied without hesitation.

And the next day he set off on a journey for the improvement of his mind, Maria went to Naples, to the house of a cousin, to fish for a heroic husband. The families had a new falling out; Maria's father had an opening made for a window which overlooked his neighbor's courtyard; the latter, in order to annoy him, built a dovecote of which the doves ran about everywhere; immediately there was a summons, a second, a third, the lawsuits began again, and this time, the advocates said, smiling, without hope of any compromise.—Translated from the Italian of E. Cavazza for Short Stories

Agreed with His Papa.

One day when about to undergo corporal punishment for one of his misdemeanors, a small boy pleaded in arrest of judgment that he had heard papa say that he was against all violence, and the proper way to settle all disputes was by ar-ar-bitration!—London Truth.

A WOMAN'S HOMEMADE GIFTS.

A "Struggling Mother" Tells What She Did to Make Her Children Happy.

I can sympathize fully with "struggling mothers," for I, too, am a widow for the past year. My children number seven, the oldest now thirteen, the youngest a baby of fourteen months. Unable to find shelter for them in the city, I have been compelled to come to a country place, where the ways of earning a living for them are very limited, but where they can find liberty and health.

We had been thinking of Christmas all the year, and even while the summer was with us we began to make and gather the things together to make ourselves and others happy.

For baby I took a lot of rags, and by pounding and firm sewing made these into a ball, which I covered with orange and blue worsted in melon shaped stripes.

My eldest girl made him a rag baby with painted face, while the second prepared leaves of cambric, and on these pasted all sorts of pictures—the brighter the better.

For Charlie, our man, I had a carpenter prepare me four solid wheels with merely a hole in the center. These mounted on cross pieces and attached to a small box, with a long stick as handle, the whole painted red, with the words "Good Boy" in gilt, pleased him well.

Rebbie paid one cent for a card of soldiers; these she cut out, pasted on pieces of cardboard cut to the same shapes and glued to small pieces of wood to make them stand upright. They formed a regiment for the same little fellow. A horn for two cents he got from Emma.

Nellie, my little one of five years, got a doll made of rags, dressed as a real baby and with a cap on, from Rebbie, while I screwed some molding to a high and low piece of board to make a bed. Instead of slats I bored holes down the sides and wove strong twine back and forth. Mattress, pillow, sheets and spread complete the gift.

Sadie, seven years old, got a rag body with a real head and dressed with clothes that have real buttons and buttonholes. She also received a doll-house, made of a box, with windows and doors cut out. This is painted on the outside and papered within. The kitchen has paper on the floor varnished over, a stove for ten cents, a table made of a spool with a square of wood glued on and little shelves to hold the tinware that costs five cents. The parlor has a small piece of carpet, furniture made of spools upholstered, the foot rests being a spool sawed into two.

For Clara, nine years old, a deep box nicely covered made into a workbox, with scissors that cost ten cents, a buttonhook your shoe dealer gives you, two crochet hooks for five cents, a small pincushion and a needlebook. A small box of pasteboard neatly covered with crinkled tissue paper, with three handkerchiefs made of lawn, nicely scalloped, feather stitched, with initial in the corner, she got from sister Rebbie.

Emma also received a mate to this box. Two books—"Life of Josephine" and "Mr. Rutherford's Children—that I one day bought at a secondhand stand for five cents apiece form the presents she got.

For Rebbie, my thirteen-year-old girl, I gave fifteen cents to a carpenter for some pieces of board, in each corner of which he bored a hole. These, strung together by the aid of brass vestibule rod, a cent a foot, and empty spools, formed the hanging shelves or cabinet she long wished.

To lessen this expense I might have used rope if I wished. Nicely painted white, with every spool gilded, it looks very pretty.

Two peach baskets fastened together, with a deep ruffle of turkey red and nicely lined, formed a workbasket for my Christmas present.

We thought of others, too, for that happy day. Old Mrs. Sprague, a helpless cripple, got a worsted cape, while a silkolene head rest and a foot rest made of a box mounted on four doorstops, covered nicely and with a frill about it, pleased the old gentleman.

These complete the list of the things we prepared for Christmas. But I can think of many more for young and old which would demand much work, but little cash.

The woods gave us a tree and strings of green. The dried grasses, wheat and oat sprays gathered in the summer and tied with strips of turkey red made the house look gay.

A cross rudely constructed, covered with rock moss and bright lichens, with a wreath of holly thrown over it, formed the mantel ornament for that day.—Cor. New York World.

Essentials of Gentlewomen.

Sincerity, truthfulness, conscientiousness, charity are the moral essentials of gentlewomen, wholly surpassing their minor qualities—qualities that are still important. These often relate to manners which, when true, denote some kind of virtue, and are therefore pleasing. The manners of gentlewomen are repose, quietude, self possession. But as many of the sex have these, and no inward complement, they are counterfeits speedily detected. The moral elements last and stand every test.

Gentlewomen may not be measured by common rule. They are not conventional, much as they may seem so. They are thoroughly independent, a law and a religion to themselves, an energy for social progress and enlightenment. They are to be found everywhere, often best when unsought and unimagined. Were the sex guilty of all the follies and transgressions recited by misogynists there are gentlewomen enough to absolve them all and perpetuate their worship among the sons of men.—Junius Henri Browne in St. Louis Globe Democrat.

A Pictorial Sermon.

With the desire of giving her husband a true picture of herself a Maine woman has had her photograph taken as she appeared at daily housework in her kitchen dress, with a baby on one arm and broom and dustpan on the other.—Lewiston Journal.

MONDAY January 11th.

The report of the viewers appointed to view and lay out a change in the Stewart's Point and Gualala road having been filed, Tuesday, February 2nd, was set for hearing.

The Clerk was instructed to advertise for bids for the construction of the new bridge across Gualala river, the same to be received up to 2 P. M., Febrpary 2nd.

WEDNESDAY January 13th.

Shortly after Chairman Mead took his seat at the early hour of 9 o'clock Wednesday morning. Supervisor Cady presented the following resolution which was adopted by the Board:

"In reference to the proposition of J. W. Ragsdale to furnish a complete map of Sonoma County, including township sheets for the use of the Assessor, showing each and every subdivison and the ownership of the same, also all public roads, townships and school district boundaries, rivers, streams, etc., I move that inasmuch as the said J. W. Ragsdale is the only person possessing data from which said work could be compiled, and the committee appointed to visit other counties having reported the cost of similar work which they have inspected was as much or more than the bid of Mr. Ragsdale, and the Assessor and County Surveyor both having stated that they consider the map a matter both of necessity and economy; that it is hereby ordered that the proposition of the said J. W. Ragsdale be accepted and that the chairman be authorized to enter into a contract for said work for the sum of $10,000 to be paid as delivered and accepted, provided that no more that $3,000 shall be paid out of the funds of the present year, the balance of $7,000 to be payable out of the next years' tax levy."

As soon as the resolution was adopted the Board rested from its labors.

A CANARD.

The New York Press Exposes that "Important Bill' Business.

The article credited to the New York Press, in a recent issue of this paper, in which it was alleged that unfavorable action had been taken in the New York Legislature against the Royal Baking Powder, proves to be a canard, gotten up and circulated by opposition baking powder makers for purposes quite apparent to everyone.

The New York Press, in exposing the fraud, says: "No such legislation as that stated in this article has ever been had in this State—or in any legislature, to our knowledge. The Press disclaims any responsibility for the publication, and objects to being made a party of such methods adopted by some baking powder manufacturers in their efforts to substitute their goods for others now in use.

The art of beautifying the complexion is ancient as its chief motive—the desire to obtain the admiration of the opposite sex. The women of gray antiquity knew how to give their cheeks the rosy hue denied by nature.

The income derived by French people who rear fowls is estimated to be 337,100,000 francs, of which 153,500,000 francs represent the value of the flesh, and 183,600,000 francs that of the eggs.

Workingmen's Coffee House.

The Temperance league, of Toronto, has erected a three-story substantial building on Elm street, which will be a coffee house for workingmen. A company has been formed to carry on this idea. The object of the company is to establish and operate coffee houses in places frequented by workingmen and to supply them with a cup of good coffee or tea for two cents and meals at moderate prices. Friends of this movement will be asked to take up stock at five dollars per share, and as it is expected that the work will be largely self sustaining the stock will probably be worth par.

Dogs on the Sea.

It is a strange fact that sea life changes the character of domestic creatures. After a few voyages they become as different from the lubberly land creatures of their respective species as the sailor is unlike the landsman. The ship's dog may be quite properly classed as "non-sporting." Its life is usually free from excitement. It is obliged to confine its strolls to narrow limits. It is fonder of the foremast hands than of the cabin people, probably because it finds the former more affectionate and indulgent. —London Tit-Bits.

His Idea of Angels.

Appleton, C. F. Carmer, D. Calloway, A. J. Van Every and J. B. Small, last Tuesday. An exciting runaway took place last Sunday evening about 7:30 o'clock. A horse, being driven in a light buggy by an employee of Dr. Walliser, became frightened near Schocken's corner and ran away. The driver lost control of the animal and when nearly opposite Poppe's store was dumped out. The horse continued on his mad career until the southeast corner of the Plaza was reached, when one of the wheels of the vehicle collided with the Plaza curbing, tipping over the buggy, which was badly wrecked, and bringing the festive steed to a standstill. The driver escaped without as much as a scratch, although he came in for a good mud bath.

MRS. M. E. OVERTON

Dies Very Suddenly at Ten Oaks near Glen Ellen.

Mrs. M. E. Overton, mother of Mrs. Kate F. Warfield, the lady viticulturalist, died at the latter's home, Ten Oaks, near Glen Ellen, very suddenly Sunday morning of paralysis of the brain, brought on by a severe attack of la grippe. Mrs. Warfield was absent in Los Gatos at the time, but hastened to Ten Oaks as soon as notified by telegraph of her mother's death. The remains of Mrs. Overton were embalmed and taken to Napa last Wednesday and placed in a receiving vault to await the arrival of another daughter, Mrs. Cavanaugh, residing in New York, who is now on her way to California. The funeral will then take place in Napa under the auspices of Valley of the Moon Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star of this place, of which the deceased lady was an honored member. Mrs. Overton was also a member of the Order of Chosen Friends of Marysville.

Mrs. Overton was a highly accomplished lady and numbered among her friends and acquaintances some of the greatest statesmen and their wives in the United States.

Mrs. Overton had resided in Sonoma Valley for over a quarter of a century, her husband having died near Glen Ellen about twenty years ago, his remains having been interred in Napa Cemetery, beside whom Mrs. Overton will be laid to rest.

The deceased was 65 years of age, and leaves a son, George Overton of Tucson, Arizona, two daughters, mentioned above, and a number of grand children to mourn her untimely taking off.

SNYDER-SEARS LAW SUIT.

A Compromise Effected---Perry Sears Receives $8,000 --- Mrs. Snyder Takes the Ranch.

The civil suit of Rachel J. Snyder vs. G. C. P. Sears (sister and brother) was brought to a close in the Superior Court at Santa Rosa this week by a compromise between the parties litigant which was effected through the efforts of one of Sonoma county's leading lawyers, J. P. Rodgers of Petaluma, attorney for Mr. Sears.

By the terms of the compromise Perry Sears relinquishes all his right, title and interest in his once princely domain of 800 acres to his sister, Mrs. Snyder, for the sum of $8,000.

This suit has been dragging its slow length along in our courts for a series of years, during which time much money has been spent on both sides in their respective contests for what they conceived to be their legal rights.

Perry Sears, who to a remarkable extent has had the sympathy of the people of Sonoma Valley in this vexatious law suit, has been reduced from opulency to the extent of the compromise money. Mrs. Snyder, who is independently rich, takes everything in consideration of the $8,000.

The compromise of the suit at this time, which is considered to be a victory for attorney Rodgers, will be a source of gratification to the friends of both the contestants. It was only a family feud at the most.

FINE WORK OF ART.

A Brief and Sad Sketch of a Beautiful Woman.

Last week Henry Baron, the well-known artist of this place, shipped to Vallejo a life-size crayon picture (full length standing) of the late Mrs. McCarthy (nee Lillie de Frisbie) of Syracuse, N. Y., granddaughtor of the late General and Mrs. M. G. Vallejo. The work was all executed by Mr. Baron in his studio in Sonoma. The picture is startlingly life-like and natural and its like is seldom seen outside of the celebrated art-galleries of the Old World.

The picture of this lovely girl was taken in her bridal robe, one of Worth's creation, most elaborately trimmed with orange blossoms and lilies of the valley. Her veil and handkerchief was of rare old point lace. The picture is under French plate glass and measures 7x4 feet and encased in two rich and massive frames separated by a broad panel of glass extending entirely around the same, in which is arranged the orange blossoms, lilies of the valley, bridal veil and handkerchief worn with the beautiful costume. The picture and frame rests on an easel of carved walnut surmounted with an elaborate crown, and when placed in position measures 17 feet in height and 9 feet in width. The picture has been set up in the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Frisbie of Vallejo, where it will remain for a time.

The original of the picture was the beautiful and only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frisbie of Vallejo and the granddaughter of the late illustrious General Vallejo. About fourteen years ago she gave her hand and heart to Mr. D. McCarthy, a young millionaire of Syracuse, N. Y., a gentleman well and favorably known in that city. This lovely lady had endeared herself to all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance. Her indefatigable deeds of charity were known far and wide and she was ever ready to extend the hand of sympathy to those in distress. She was a great lover of nature, not for its own beauty alone, but for the traces with which it abounds of the wisdom and love of the Creator.

Immediately after her marriage she started with her husband for her Eastern home, where she lived in uninterrupted bliss for four happy years. During that time two children had been born to add to their already happy union. But "He who ruleth all things well" had destined that in the midst of her happiness she should be called to a brighter sphere.

One morning, as she was about entering her carriage for a drive, she suddenly fell to the ground. An attendant quickly carried her into the house. A physician was summoned and she was pronounced dead. Cause, heart failure.

Dr. and Mrs. Frisbie will present the handsome and costly picture to their little grandson in Syracuse to remind him of his beautiful and sainted mother.

Science in Bread Making.

At the recent annual meeting of the American Chemical Society, held in Washington, D. C., the question of the value of carbonate of ammonia as a leavening agent in bread, or as used in baking powders, came up for discussion, in which Prof. Baker of the University of Pennsylvania, and president of the Society; Dr. Richardson, late of the United States Department of Agriculture in Washington; Wm. McMurtrie, late Prof. of Chemestry in the University of Illinois; Dr. E. H. Battley, late Chemist of Brooklyn, N. Y., Board of Health, and Prof. of Chemistry of the Long Island College, and others, took part.

The consensus of opinion was overwhelmingly in favor of the employment of ammonia. It was stated as a fact that ammonia rendered the gluten of the flour more soluble than the original gluten, and that the bread in which this action was produced by carbonate of ammonia must be more digestible and hence more healthful, and because of the extreme volatility of ammonia and its complete expulsion from the bread in the process of baking, it is one of the most useful, most healthful and most valuable leavening agents known.

These conclusions are borne out by the very elaborate and exhaustive experiments made by Prof. J. W. Mallet of the University of Virgina, which shows conclusively that bread made with a baking powder in which one per cent of carbonate of ammonia is used in connection with cream of tartar and soda is not only of uniformly better color and texture, but a product more wholesome, because the ammonia serves to neutralize any organic or lactic acids present in the flour.

The World Enriched.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to clense the system gently in the Spring time or, in fact, at any time and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

Sunday funerals in Washington will soon be a thing of the past, as some of the best cemeteries in the above city will not permit a burial on Sunday. To be born, to be married, to die or to be buried on Sunday will soon be quite "bad form" among the religious four hundred.

Frightful Shipwreck.

Staunch ships strike and founder, the fierce winds and mountainous waves sweep noble mariners, "hearts of oak," to shipwreck and to death, yet that does not prevent the lubberliest landsman from risking his life on the stormy Atlantic in the role of tourist or commercial traveler. But if he shall reach his destination safely he will scarcely have escaped some of the qualms of sea sickness unless he takes with him Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, that inimitable specific for nausea. Bad water on long trips is a threat to the voyager, but this may be deprived in a great measure of its disordering effects upon the stomach, bowels and liver by the Bitters. Against the prejudicial effects of malaria, bad diet, fatigue and exposure it is efficacious. It averts, moreover, rheumatism and kidney complaints. Don't travel on sea or land without it."

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of the Gov. Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich. and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with Measles, followed with a dreadful Cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones." Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. AMMONIA AND ALUM BAKING POWDER.

How to Detect Them.

In view of what the Minnesota Senate has done, it is hoped that legislative bodies in other States will soon take up the subject of food adulteration. The subjoined list of baking powders containing ammonia and alum, compiled from official reports and published in a recent number of the Scientific American, is given below. "It deals in a direct manner with an evil which must be cut down" said the Chicago Tribune in commenting on the Scientific American report. Following is a partial list of

AMMONIA AND ALUM BAKING POWDERS.

Compiled from Official Reports.

Powders marked with a star seem to have a general sale, as they are mentioned in at least two of the reports.

Ammonia and alum are the most common adulterants used in the manufacture of baking powders. The Government report shows that a large percentage of the baking powders on the market contain either one or the other, or both these pernicious drugs.

What woman would use an ammonia or alum baking powder if she knew it? Such powders not only undermine the health, but ammonia gives to the complexion a sallow or blotched appearance.

The presence of ammonia or alum in a baking powder, however, can easily be detected.

TO DETECT AMMONIA.—Mix one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder with one teaspoonful of water in a tin cup; boil thoroughly for a few moments, stir to prevent burning, and if ammonia is present you can smell it in the rising steam. Or, place a can of the suspected powder top down on a hot stove for a minute or two, then take off the cover and smell.

TO DETECT ALUM—Alum powder can be usually detected by putting a couple of teaspoonfuls of the powder in a glass of cold water. If no effervescence, that is bubbling or simmering, takes place, condemn the powder and return it at once.

John Knight, a pioneer resident of the Russian River valley, died in the County Jail of Mendocino county one day this week. At one time he was one of the largest land owners in this county, but in the early fifties and sixties he fell into the hands of land sharpers who loaned him small sums of money on his possessions at exorbitant rates of interest, with the result that in a few years the Sheriff came along and put others in possession of his belongings. He then took to drink and became an outcast, finally dying a vagabond's death.

The County's Money.

Chairman Smith of the Board of Supervisors, District Attorney Burnett and County Auditor Hall counted the money in the county treasury, Friday, with the following result: Gold coin, $20,672.78; silver, $241.50 gold certificates, $143,812 91; total, $164,527.19.

LOADED FOR BEAR

Petaluma Nimrods Mobilizing for the "Index-Tribune's" Find.

[From the Petaluma Courier.]

The tracks of a bear—a real big live bear—has been seen on the Kiser farm in the foothills south of town, says the Sonoma Index-Tribune, and that the dread indications were first discovered by a duck hunter. This is joyful news to the nimrods of Petaluma and they are filling up innumerable shells for the war path—or rather the bear path.

J.C. Lewis says he has not bagged a "bar" since he went hunting with General Vallejo in the spring of '50.

Tony Mego and Ed Hedges are loaded for grizzley.

Platt Gilbert will take out an extra life policy in the Mutual Relief Association, call his blooded dog and camp on that bear's trail.

W. A. Brown is hunting around the barn for his old Kentucky rifle and filling up a new powder-horn.

John Merritt has a "durned good notion" to go along too, and if he does Uncle Henry Lawerence will stroll down that way himself

Dan Egan hasn't lost any bear.

Sam Cassiday says it isn't a good day for that kind of critters.

Ike Button and Bob Adams have a notion that the Lifting club will soon banquet on bear steaks.

L. C. Byce says chickens better'n bear.

Joseph Cowen is going to get a gun.

Geo Cudding is going to get a gun.

Jim Kill the builder, proposes to erect an elaborate bear-trap, catch the grzzley alive and send it to the World's Fair as a delegate from Bear Flag Parlor, N. S. G. W.

J. P. Rogers avows that the great opportunity of his life has come.

Charley Singley says that he has a string on that griz.

Harry Maynard wants the claws for a necklace when he puts on his warpaint at the Iroquois Club ghost-dance.

J. H. McNabb of the Argus, wants the bear barbecued for the Press League should that body finally decide to visit Petaluma. A fare of bear, he avers, will tickle the Eastern journalistic palate almost to death and draw for Old Sonoma many, many taffy-writeups from the stranger feeders.

Several crack shots of Company C. N. G. C., are practicing in the shooting gallery, and are convincing their anxious friends that bear killing is good preliminary practice for the coming Chilean war in which they expect to participate.

LOVE'S CONVICTION.

When leaves are green, or golden sere—
O bright and unforgotten love—
Once in the circuit of the year,
I bend thy lonely grave above.

There, where steep soars the virgin hill,
And the blue channel waters roll,
I go to muse and to fulfill
A tender yearning of the soul;

To muse on days that far away
In Time's gray ocean, like an isle
Touched with the pearly bloom of May
And lit with morning, shine and smile;

To marvel when, to wonder where
These searching eyes shall find thee next,
Find thee, still gracious, firm and fair,
With sorrow's mystery unvext.

Faith's noblest instinct is not blind,
Hope's larklike music empty speech;
I shall find thee, we lose to find,
By the dark vale the mountains reach.
—Joseph Truman in London Spectator.

When Two Women Talked at Once.

Mrs. Barnhill and Miss Annie Donovan came to Justice Engle's court to adjust a little difference relating to the nonpayment of rent. Mrs. Barnhill unfolded her tale of woe and Miss Donovan started her story. She had not gone far when Mrs. Barnhill chimed in too.

Then the race started. Each woman with tense nerves settled down to talk to the end. Their tongues wagged as if they had been hung on pivots. It was the most artistic exhibition of the kind that had been seen in Brooklyn for many years. The justice rapped for order. The women continued talking.

The judge then began to pound on the desk, and although he pounded and implored the women for silence, they resolutely continued. Five court officers, two interpreters, one clerk and a stenographer could not stop the noise, and the hubbub increased. The justice began to grow nervous. Seizing his hat he made a dash for the door. The women followed him as he sprinted down the hall. Out into the street they went, the justice leading by two lengths, but the women running strong and gaining at every stride.

Their tongues never stopped. The justice captured a horse car at the nearest corner. "Don't let these women on," he gasped.

The conductor divined the situation at once, and running to the front platform he assisted the driver to get more speed out of the animals. The women, still talking, were following close behind, but the car soon outstripped them and the justice's life was saved.—New York Telegram.

Courtesy in Christmas Shopping.

The Listener met a lady the other day who confessed that she purposely postponed her Christmas shopping until the last week before Christmas for the sake of the enjoyment which she gets out of the great crowds that throng the stores then. She says that she is interested most of all in the innate courtesy that women display under such circumstances. This will be a matter of surprise to a good many people, who haven't noticed that courtesy is a marked characteristic of the Christmas shopping crowds. Perhaps the disposition and breeding of the lady herself who made this remark had something to do with her observations.

Courtesy is always a twin. When we take her down town with us we meet her at every street corner. Provided one has a bit of time and the temperament of a philosopher there certainly might be a good deal of pleasure in watching and studying the proceedings of the Christmas buyer. "Do you think, now, that this would suit my daughter?" this lady was asked by an elderly woman who was buying presents. The lady took it as an honor to be asked such a question. She took it gravely into consideration and gave her advice with great seriousness, and beyond all doubt with perfect satisfaction to the woman and her daughter.—Boston Transcript.

Two Ways of Describing It.

A and B met Mrs. Kendal at an afternoon tea in Boston recently. A got a word or two with her, but B stood talking for about an hour. They explained the matter to me separately.

A said: "B would stand there talking at Mrs. Kendal. The hostess would present Smith to her, and when the first how do you do was over, B would resume, 'As I was saying, Mrs. Kendal'— The hostess would present Brown. B would break in, 'As you were remarking, Mrs. Kendal'— The hostess would present Robinson. B would implore, 'Do let me finish that anecdote of mine, Mrs. Kendal'"——

"Oh, I did have such a lovely long talk, such a charming talk, with Mrs. Kendal," B gushed out at me. Really, she talked with me more than half an hour, we found each other so congenial. She told me about her own dear boys at college—Oxford, in England. I asked her to visit me at Harvard, but she said she was bringing out three plays a week, or she would be charmed. I do wish she could come; I know she would enjoy it, the charming woman. Every little rag of a heart I have left is madly in love with her. There must have been some fine sympathy between us to keep us talking together so charmingly and so long."—Boston Journal.

The Needlework Guild.

The Needlework guild, since its attempt to enlarge its workings, has met with most flattering success. Nearly a hundred branch guilds are in operation, with the number daily increasing. The guild is a national one, founded on the plan of Lady Wolverton's English Needlework society.

The beauty of this charity is its simplicity. The furnishing of two new garments a year constitutes a member's qualifications, and a local president receives and distributes the articles without further trouble on behalf of the donor. Like the King's Daughters, the absence of all red tape assures its rapid growth. The English society has been in existence only eight years, yet last year over 200,000 garments were distributed to the sick and needy poor. Men, women and children may become members. Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge and Mrs. Lyman Abbott are the respective presidents of the New York and Brooklyn guilds.—New York Times.

"August Flower"

For two years I suffered terribly with stomach trouble, and was for all that time under treatment by a physician. He finally, after trying everything, said stomach was about worn out, and that I would have to cease eating solid food for a time at least. I was so weak that I could not work. Finally on the recommendation of a friend who had used your preparations with beneficial results, I procured a bottle of August Flower, and commenced using it. It seemed to do me good at once. I gained in strength and flesh rapidly; my appetite became good, and I suffered no bad effects from what I ate. I feel now like a new man, and consider that August Flower has entirely cured me of Dyspepsia in its worst form. JAMES E. DEDERICK, Saugerties, New York.
